

MRS. HALL MAY SEEK A REST FOR RAGGED NERVES IN ITALY

"Not Now, but Later, Perhaps," Says Widow Acquitted in Murder Trial—Went There for Peace Before

Back to Italy are turning the eyes of Mrs. Frances Noel Hall.

It was to that sunny land that she betook herself after her husband, the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, had been slain with his sweetheart, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

It was from that land she returned to be arrested and tried and acquitted of the choir singer's murder.

It is to that land that she soon may go to rest nerves long frayed in the courtroom.

Mrs. Hall was reached by telephone today at her home in New Brunswick.

Was she going to the Mediterranean, far from the State of New Jersey, which during the trial she termed "not a fit place for decent people to live in"?

Mrs. Hall would not answer directly. No, she was not sailing the end of this month, as rumor had it.

"I have made no plans for going abroad—at least, not in the near future," she said.

"But later?"

"Later, perhaps, but not now."

And Mrs. Hall hung up, leaving the impression that she might be spending her evenings looking over steamship circulars and dreaming of warm skies way down in the south of Europe.

Incidentally it was learned that Timothy N. Pfeiffer, her personal attorney from New York, who stood be-

The guests were Senators Willis of Ohio and Warren of Wyoming, Republicans; Walsh of Montana and Reed of Missouri, Democrats; Representatives Thatcher of Kentucky, Pratt of New York, Johnson of South Dakota and Williams of Illinois, Republicans, and Crisp of Georgia, Hudspeth of Texas and Pou of North Carolina, Democrats.

Wood Silent on U. S. Visit side her during the four long years she was under public suspicion, had sailed yesterday for Italy on the Conte Biancamano.

Had he gone ahead to prepare for his client's arrival?

Not according to Robert N. Neilson, a relative of Mrs. Hall's and a member of the defense counsel. He declared positively there was no connection between Mr. Pfeiffer's departure and Mrs. Hall's reported trip.
